This chapter examines how fear arises after initial freedom. We begin with the elemental truth: We are all born free. Here, we interpret freedom as freedom from fear, and show how fear enters to cage the mind. How it gets to become us and we become the outgrowths of what it wants us to be, how we have domesticated this monster, a few that have the crucial knowledge we decided to rate up it and use it to harm the system. It's your duty at the end of the day to find one that can be used instead of your conflict and watching everything go down
do something.

DEATH OF FEAR

Cc: Ashraf Subega

Death Of Fear CHAPTER

take reading this as your best possible use of free will

We are not using the idea that if you go rogue, or say something contrary to what the system preaches, or simply speak a few facts, you automatically become a hero. The fact that speaking the truth in the world right now is enough to label someone a freedom fighter or a great leader says a lot about this world and this generation.

We are speaking to your mind today and most importantly by the end of the 3rd chapter we'll be speaking with you.

FLY

You are not free; you are comfortable. Some of the reasons you are not free is because you do not even know you are in prison, the prison of your own thoughts and mind. The majority of us are scared of something, and that fear becomes the limit our minds create for ourselves. Our minds are the architects of our realities, universe and world; they are so powerful that they can destroy us or glorify us. Your mind controls you, and whoever has the key to your mind controls you. I am here to hand your key back to you. You tell yourself, "You can do this," but you are still afraid to do it. We use past traumas and experiences to generate a sense of foresight that is not always accurate, and the ego feeds on that. The promise of the future blinds you to how poorly you may be living in the present, and instead of taking small steps toward healing, you are consumed by the possibilities of things.

Choose life over death

SOCIETY HAS FAILED US

Interpretation is one of the most disturbing issues we face in the world; we have different perspectives of the exact same thing, which is both a superpower and a great curse. In this book, we are not speaking your truth, we have promised to stay true only to the truth. Everything you read here guides you down a single path: the right path toward being who you are supposed to be, who you have always been, and who you actually are.

So, with the greatest open mind you can muster, take a brief moment to close your eyes. Ask your mind for the knowledge and wisdom to understand this book the way it was written, not the way your favorite influencer has explained it. Good or bad, don't trust the news or anything related. Dig deeper and understand the source yourself. Do not let another man just like you describe things you are entirely capable of interpreting on your own. Do not give them the power you once gave to the words of man, because we are writing this for you, not them.

Before we go any further, We wish to stress this, because it matters more than anything else here; each time we use the word society, it is 'us' we are talking about. 'You and I', Not them. Not out there. 'Us'. We are the members of the society we blame. We tend to prefer to blame others and convince ourselves that we are the good guys. We didn't build the society, but we take part in it, we sustain it every time we choose fear over truth and this comes down to a great factor today, how accountability.

For every man, we expose its origin, then we show how it manifests in your life. We present a path to reclaiming our birthright of absolute freedom; built on awareness and in need of a question. We believe we have quiet daily work of healing. This phase concludes by proclaiming what I believe with everything I am: that fear can be slain and freedom restored. Freedom has never been taken from us permanently. It was only forgotten.

We are entirely responsible for what happens around us. It is nobody else's job to keep your water pure, it is yours. You are the prophet you've been waiting for. As beings, we all hold equal power by default; to believe otherwise is a delusion, a fixation on things that ultimately mean nothing in the long run. You'll notice the use of the word 'new world' which we use mostly in context to mean the revolving world around us in real time.

BIRTH OF FEAR

I'm writing about fire with a burnt hand, we already have an answer to all questions

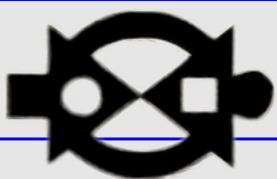

When we start the journey, We exist in a state of pure freedom and rest. We are all born free, free from fear. Fear does not exist until we create it. Infants know only instinct and wonder, laugh at phobias and several times cry from surprise, but they do not understand dread yet. They stand in the world in freedom, unfettered by doubt. When we are young, we are free. A newborn does not hesitate to love. They give everything freely, openly and always pure, without thoughts, because they have not yet learnt that the world will use that openness against them.

You hope is being used against you, just like when you were still a child. Learning a reasoning being and begin to learn and comprehend a lot of what's happening around you, the steps when you have an important element of faith about or the experience, questioning everything you see, even those that seemed obvious, how you were answered also greatly affected who you are today and how your brain works. These steps being subconscious of everything, never get comfortable, create your peace but never allow yourself to be manipulated by others, not even your own mind.

This chapter begins by exploring fear itself. We will define fear as something imposed. We will show that freedom means being free from fear. When fear is absent, even for a moment, we experience true freedom. Everything written here starts from that truth; that we began free, and we can return to it. The return is not easy. Nothing worth having ever is. But it is possible, and the possibility is enough to begin.

I'm no longer accepting the everything I cannot change, I'm changing everything I cannot accept.

People acting out of love are scared, living in total fear. Look around you. Whoever isn't in love, you know where they fall. How many of them are scared?

To get there, we must first see the chains. Fear is a barrier that hides you from the truth, a prison built entirely from thought. It convinces you to accept less than you are, to shrink yourself to fit spaces that were never meant to hold you. It whispers so consistently and quietly that after a while you stop hearing it as a voice and start hearing it as your own instinct. That is its greatest trick — making itself indistinguishable from you. As we proceed through this chapter, we will encounter each kind of fear that confines us. For now, LET this be clear: fear is not who we are. Fear is what happened to us.

We don't know who we are, so we can't define what's really happening around us. We have constructed the very thing that controls us. We give it power. We lost our freedom willingly; no one forced us. We trusted people who didn't need to be trusted. You might ask, "A few years later, won't we change?" But we won't, because we lack a sense of self. We don't even want to believe the most basic truth—that we are selfish beings. We believe we are special because we have old knowledge that supports that belief, knowledge that we wrote ourselves. None of this makes complete sense. Imagine you are not yourself, but somebody else. You don't own your habits or truly love what you claim to love. Every day, you fall for a mind game that the system depends on to sustain itself. If you don't awaken your own world, this will be your life forever. The other side is more peaceful. Suffering is not imposed upon us by God.

They put before you life and death and you choose death.

FEAR AND FREEDOM?

Some people in prison are more free than majority of people out, as long as you have things holding you back from who you truly are, you are in prison.

Freedom, in this context, is simple. To be free is to have no fear in that moment. A person locked in chains can still be free within, if their mind carries no fear of those chains. The body can be imprisoned and the spirit untouched. As long as you feel no fear, you are free. That is not a small thing. That is everything.

Supporting resistance is not a crime, the definition of terrorist changes depending on who says it.

What influences you? What have you chosen to destroy you? I am basically asking a very simple question because, yes, we are all influenced by something. Something motivates us, keeps us going, gives us hope. Influence makes us, molds us, builds us into something we can or cannot control. I believe there isn't a point where someone is far too gone. I believe what we have decided to tell ourselves is not always who we are. Many people are influenced by their surroundings to become what they become. Circumstances have changed all of us and continue to do the same every single day. Something happens that changes everything. Being who you actually are is hard. Sometimes it takes quite a while to sound like yourself. I started this like this because being normal is being yourself. All the other things are perspectives of other people, and we clearly know by now you can't impress everyone. I am only communicating to like a billion people; I am not trying to please all of them. Why do you give people who have no power absolute power over you? The way you look, eat, and live should be what makes you happy because that is the point. But what makes you happy is an idea that has been implanted in you. Our thoughts are being influenced so much by the system; they have built strong empires in our minds. It is not your thought, it is theirs. They benefit from everything, especially your suffering.

Question your perspective relentlessly. You cannot truly take pride in pain simply because you want to belong.

Fear is the opposite of freedom, an idea made whole by the mind, it's a story we tell ourselves about danger, rehearsed so many times it begins to feel like fact. The mind learns fear from outside itself; from the society, the media, the past and your environment, the slow accumulation of moments where the world responds to our openness with punishment. Fear comes from ignorance of truth. It rises when we assume that what hurt us before will always hurt us, that the future is simply the past wearing a different face. *Remember freedom is pure love.

The new world is a big prison and your addiction is your special cell

We are against greedy war profiteers, homicidal sociopaths and leaders who hijacked society's power structures from within and continue to weaponize & exploit power against all life on earth for personal gain, cause mass suffering and misery for everyone else but themselves.

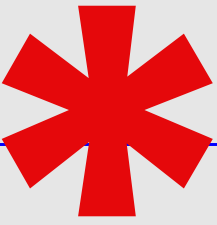

If you can't control what you see, listen & read, you can't control your freedom, ensure you have overall control over these three at all times, that's the 7th step.

You can't make decisions based on fear and the possibility of what might happen

Own your truth, don't trust anybody to do it for you, earlier we introduced pioneer individualism to reflect how self aware you have to be to experience everything to your true potential, you can't trust anyone else, we have all been brainwashed and yourself is the only chance.

道

We are the answer to this generation

This season is still something I don't want to talk about. I will one day, but not today. It breaks a cycle, though, an insidious cycle of needing to always be right. We are blinded by that compulsion; relationships are shattered because of it. I have learned that we can never possess identical minds. Geopolitics says it all: at what point do we stop slaughtering each other and finally agree that we are all wrong? How many young children must your religion sacrifice before you realize that you are wrong, no matter what comforting lies you tell yourselves when you return home?

We are the ones they have always talked about.

One man at the vigil said; 'what is wrong with the children of this generation' then I remembered a quote I read somewhere that said, 'WHO RAISED THE GENERATION YOU COMPLAIN?' This question proved the statement we started with in the beginning, Society has failed us, and it still is. Ignorance in this new world of fast speed information and artificial intelligence is a strong sin, I think it's a great sin, information is not good but if your cortex is fully developed and you really can't do the most basic thing required of an adult being of differentiating wrong information from right information, stop reading from here and go back to doom scrolling. You are wrong if you think you can save the whole world, but I accept to be wrong when it comes to this, I believe if I tell you this truth and you share it to another man, we are all redeemed.

BAD.I.AM

The war child shouted, if I had wings I would fly back home. I'm here to show you your wings and guide you on your way home, I'm a psychompomp.

I won't give up on you, I'll save you if you stay here.

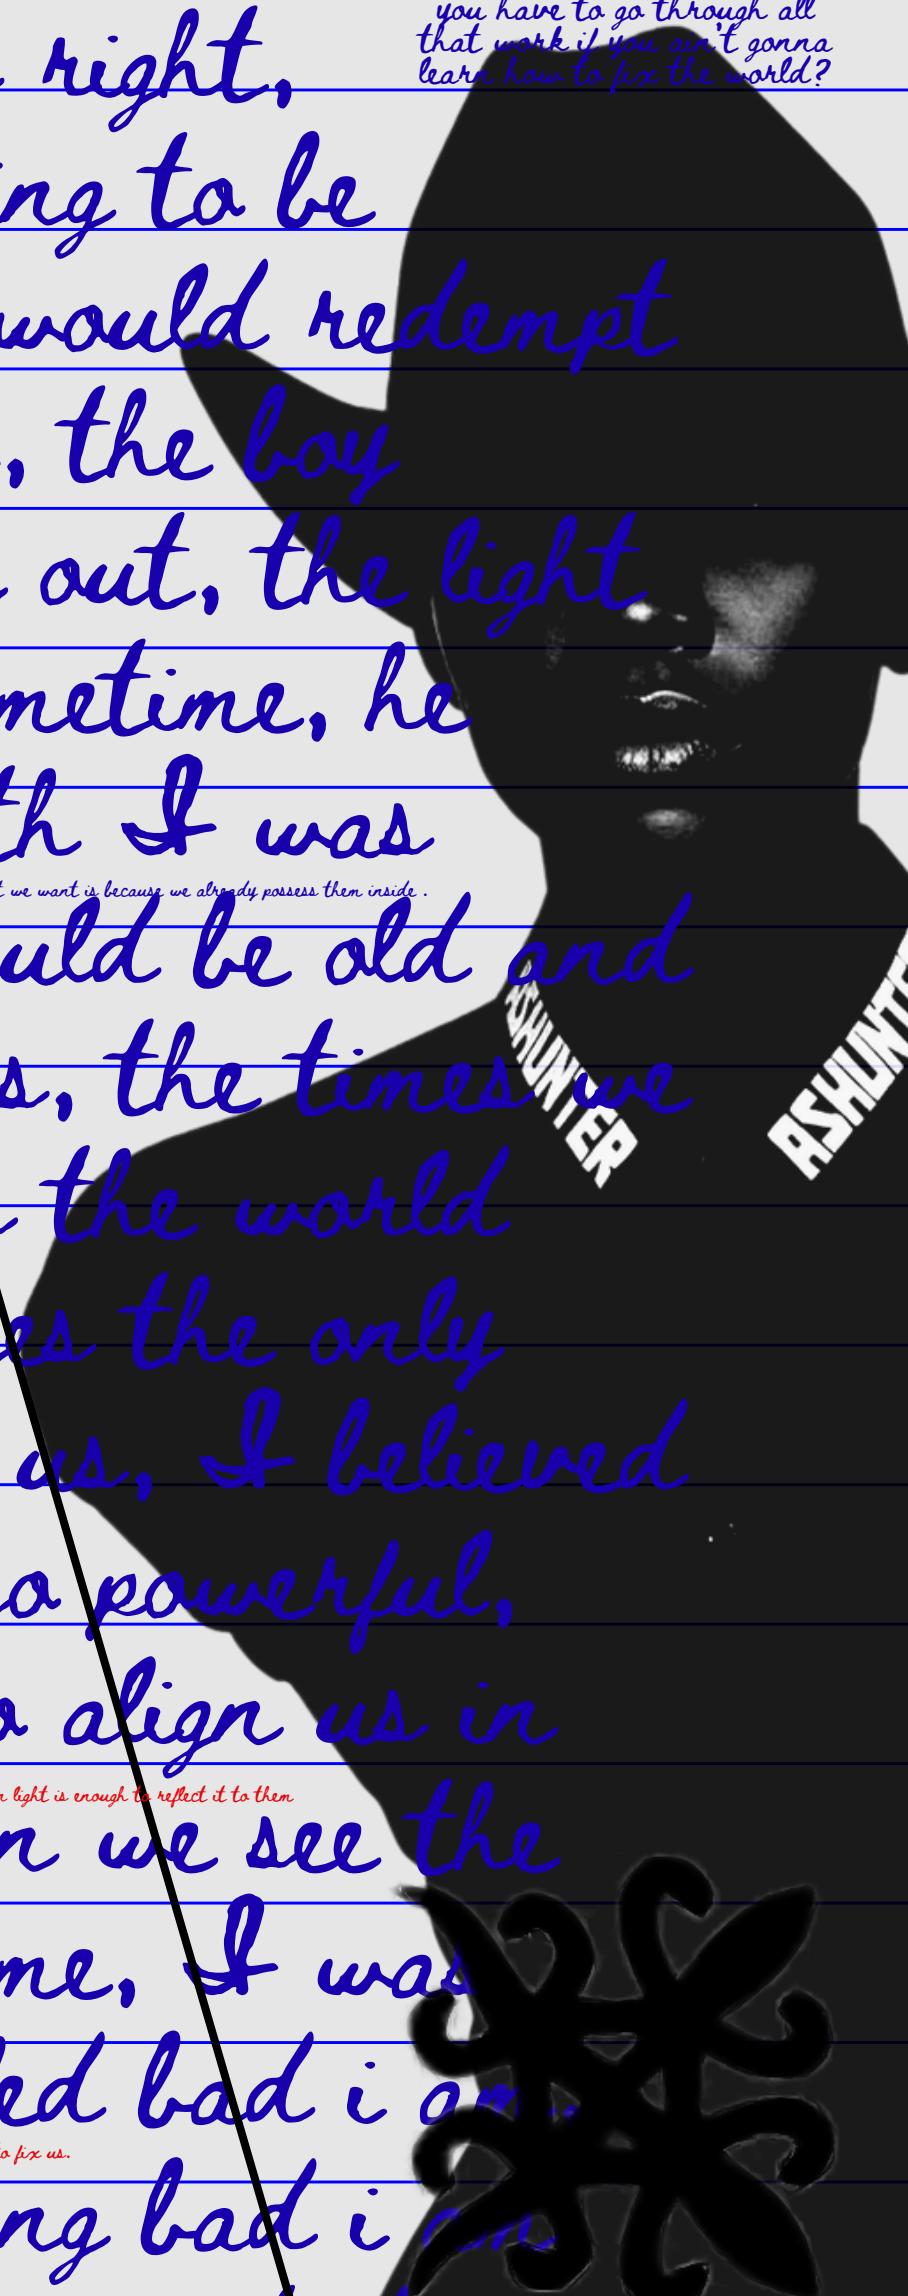

Why do you learn, why do you have to go through all that work if you ain't gonna learn how to fix the world?

I believed I was right, everything was going to be perfect, bad i am would redeem himself like I did, the boy would see the way out, the light will shine after sometime, he would see the truth I was seeking too, we would be old and remember the times, the times we had fun, the times the world was dark, the times the only thing we had was us, I believed the dreams were so powerful, powerful enough to align us in the light even when we see the dark for a long time, I was wrong, society failed bad i am. society is still failing bad i am society forgets who created us.

We would see that everything we are looking for is inside of us already, the reason we can't find what we want is because we already possess them inside.

You have to show your people the light, remind them of who they are, being in light is enough to reflect it to them

Society prefers blaming us, than taking accountability to fix us.

LONELY

Everything will be alright in the end and if it's not then is not the end " one of my best quotes I've heard

You are enough to be alone with. You were whole before anyone arrived and you remain whole in their absence. The love you have been searching for in places, relationships, notifications and all crowded evenings spent feeling invisible, that love lives in you. Other people can reflect it, can amplify it, can walk alongside it. But they were never its source. You were "I" was. And since the being is the I in your I am; the divine and you are not two separate things pretending to be one, you are one in a perfect seamless union, that source has never run dry, and it never will. Discover that, and solitude will never frighten you again.

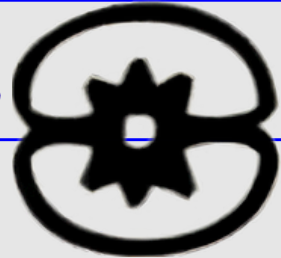

"YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE ALONE ANYMORE"

This is the theory that the world buried under religion and ritual and the fear of its own implications, God in man and man in God. You are in God the way a wave is in the ocean. The wave does not exist separately from the ocean. The ocean does not exist without its waves. You are an expression of the divine, walking around in skin, experiencing itself, learning itself, healing itself. And because that is true, because God is the very ground of your existence, the very awareness behind your eyes, you have never been alone. You were never abandoned. The presence that has been with you through every moment when every human being seemed impossibly far away, that was not emptiness. That was God, closer than your own breath, or your own heartbeat, waiting for you to stop looking outward long enough to feel what was already there.

You have never been alone. For a single second of your existence. Before the first person who chose to stay, there was something already present in you, something that never left, something that cannot leave because it is not separate from you. It is you. The "I" in your "I am." When you say, "I am," when you feel that quiet, undeniable sense of your own existence, that awareness that you are here, and you are alive, and you are present, that is the being in you. Being is not above you in the skies or watching from a distance. Inside the very breath of your being, the pulse of your awareness, "I" lies.

I can't wait for tomorrow, it's the only thing you need to tell yourself, each time you're tired of waiting.

YOU DON'T UNDERSTAND AND I WON'T EXPLAIN, NOT TODAY

You are not alone. In the 3rd chapters, we'll help you look inside & see it for yourself.

People have misused the word God so much that it creates an immediate division instead of binding people together, they have pushed the being to a distance, and it's their perspective and not yours and neither is it the truth, religion is division and if the only thing keeping you from being horrible is that then I've got no kind words for you.

LOVE

There are no sinners we are all saints, no one is alone, you just living in the lie

There are no sinners. There are only people who have forgotten who they are. We are not separated from love; we are one with it. Love is not something we earn, and it is not something that abandons us. It has always been with us, waiting to be remembered. Fear convinces us that we are divided, unworthy, and alone, while love reminds us that we have never been separate from one another. The moment we begin to see ourselves and others through love instead of fear, judgment gives way to understanding, and condemnation gives way to compassion. We do not return to love because we were cast out of it. We return because we remember that it has always been our true nature.

IS LOVE.

WE ARE LOVE

Love is who we truly are, who we have always been, our original self, the air we breathe, the water we drink, and the wind around us. It's all love. It is a beautiful feeling and a wonderful truth that we all exist in love and live within it for all the days of our lives, in oneness and union with it. We can't distance ourselves from it and when we think we have, we still find it, because it never leaves. It is always there; it is for who choose to ignore it, but that does not mean it is absent. We do not lack, because love is unconditionally full. We do not yet because love does not fail to provide what we truly need.

And if you are to take only a few words deeply into your heart from this page today, let this remain: "When you feel lost, look deep inside you, and love will lead the way. Love is the only right way."

*LTY=Fly!

*Things are only random because you are ignorant

We had options to slip and become one of them and the world refused a thousand times, this is what we do because it chooses us everyday when it stops, you won't see us talk.

Growth is the daily decision to separate the two. If we can free our minds from the fears that have quietly governed them for years, we begin to see ourselves for who we truly are, one another, and the world differently. That is where change begins, and that is where LTYB begins. From the beginning we have been working on getting this storyline right to you. This chapter marks the end of one journey and the beginning of another. we wanted you to truly understand the importance of each character in the development of this story before moving forward, so you'll have LTYB now, it's all yours.

Let the Young Boy Fly is for all of us. It was created for you. One of the important lessons from this collection is that freedom begins in the mind before it is seen anywhere else. All dreams begin with a mind that has refused to remain imprisoned. This chapter is an invitation to that freedom. Asks us to look inside before we look outside, to understand who we are, the fears that we carry, where they came from, and how they shape the lives we live. Some make us stronger, while others keep us from becoming who we were created to be.

protect me and I'll protect you*

If democracy was the goal and equal rights and peace was the optimum goal for the world then why would you fight hard in nations of interest and install or sustain unjust dictators and what they do to their citizens doesn't matter yet you are freedom fighters, careful young man before you post papers, before you call your friend a terrorist, before the propaganda tool has been used to degrade your brothers, what you believe could be so wrong, your patriotism should first be in yourself, love yourself because the war you fight for is over, its now the war you fight against.

You are a spirit that has a body not a body that has a spirit. And the fear of death (mother of all fears), examined all the way to its bottom, is really the fear of forgetting that. It is the god in you trembling at the illusion of its own ending. It's the wave terrified of returning to the ocean, not knowing that the ocean is what it always was.

Fear death and you will fear everything, because everything contains it. Face death and you will fear nothing, because nothing it touches can take from you what you truly are. My wife believes death is a beautiful gift and I agree with her.

Die before you die. That is the oldest instruction for freedom ever given. Sit with the reality of your mortality not to be consumed by it but to be liberated by it. Let it show you what actually matters. Let it burn away every petty fear and moment you spent performing for people whose names you will not remember and who will not remember yours. When you truly accept that your time here is finite, a lot of things shift. The trivial loses its grip & important things become luminous. You stop waiting for the right moment and you start living in the only moment that has ever existed, this one.

Free Yourself

We see it in propaganda, the ancient tool of power, dressed in new clothes every generation but always doing the same work. Spreading fear to justify wars, to justify oppression, to justify the silencing of voices that ask too many questions. And we see it in today's new world's echo chambers, in the rotten culture that has adopted to cancel what it cannot answer and destroy what it cannot control. "Never be scared of what you don't understand instead, try hard to understand it," disclaimer. Don't hate what you don't understand it's stupid.

Consider how language is used, because language is the first weapon. When you call a people ghosts, devils, animals, and inhuman, you are not just insulting them. You make it easier to harm them. You remove the guilt from the hand that strikes because the mind has already been told that what stands there is not fully human. History is soaked in this. And today the same mechanism runs through social media algorithms that are designed not to inform you but to provoke you, to keep you afraid, to keep you angry, because fear and anger are the most profitable human emotions ever discovered.

We are the change we have been waiting for. Us. You and I. We have to stand now, pick ourselves up, dust off every layer of fear placed on us without our knowledge, and get ready. Because the time is coming and it will wait for nobody. We stand up now. We move fast forward. We free our minds first because a mind caged by fear cannot build anything worth living in. Freedom begins within and can be seen on the outside, from one person to the next we must work on unlocking the doors, from one act of courage to the next we need to move mountains, until it becomes the whole world. Each Morning you wake up is a call to be better and move beyond your comfort. You are more powerful and stronger than you ever imagine you are. You are one of us.

The system, whenever it can when we are fast. Nothing makes any head in the system different they are just one and you fast, we can challenge ourselves and change ourselves if anyone we want, power is always in our hands. We are not separate from it, society is you and it remembers that. Every time we say nothing, off the charts, we created a new headline without questioning it. All the time we joined the mob because the conformity felt safer than standing alone, we were the system. We fast it. We kept it alone. We be aware of who you are beside you from all this.

The path out of fear is open. It has always been open. We walk it together, you, me, everyone who picks up these pages and feels something shift inside them, some old weight beginning to loosen, some long forgotten version of themselves beginning to stir. We are part of a great promise, a promise older than any religion, empire, older than every system that was ever built. We are gods. Creators of reality. Each of us is sovereign of our own soul. And with that power, fully remembered and fully owned, we release the last chain with the calm and certain authority of someone who has finally remembered who they are.

They put before you life and death and you chose life.

Reality is simply an illusion, we make a great mistake each time we think we have the same reality or we see the same things or feel the same way because we don't, we don't have the same mind so by default we see different, connecting to the spirit mind is what truly makes us one, our oneness is only with truth, I long for you to know this. Our definition of knowing is the union you have with the truth. Reality is frequently inaccurate, what you see is not real, don't believe everything you see and for the a hundredth time question everything. I've started this chapter with reality because the fear propagated by the system works in mysterious ways, it has gone through generations of perfecting, from ancient times to now, religion to writing, bullsh*t and make it our history. I really don't understand why its so hard for us to question the old notes, do we actually think these guys actually wrote this or it was the government then.

Case Study: If the news of the things we see happening is fake and they don't care about what you saw or think they publish it anyway, imagine history, how wrong and edited is history?

Systems don't change, their leaders do, revolutions never end, they are just postponed, and no matter how much you go in bed with the state, always remember they don't stand for you we are on our own, no country is fighting for your rights or peace, they are fighting for your gold and control. The illusion that a person who takes care of you and heals you after they intentionally knocked you down is one the reason for your misery in the first place is crazy and that's how they system is, it keeps the food to starve you and then give you some of your food. No one cares about your wellbeing, your safety or your rights, democracy is calculated crap, its a managed illusion, as long as they control the narrative and the money, your voice is useless because you are exactly what they want you to be, reaching this far breaks a cycle, the system's cycle and they ain't happy, but we shall keep each other safe.
